SRM Global Hospitals performs rare hernia surgery on 28-day-old infant

Chennai, Sep 12: SRM Global Hospitals successfully performed a complex, three-part emergency surgery to save the life of a critically premature baby boy with Amyand's hernia, a rare condition where the appendix is located in the groin—only the fourth case of its kind in medical history in the world.

The boy, born at just 28 weeks, underwent surgery on the 23rd day after his birth while under general anesthesia. The procedure was successful, and post-operatively, the child recovered well, gaining weight to reach 2.06 kg and was discharged in good general condition.

It was a highly challenging surgery as the boy, like any other premature baby, had an immature airway that made anesthesia more difficult and required precise management. Furthermore, the delicate tissues required careful surgical handling to avoid damage. Additionally, the low birth weight of the infant necessitated specialized postoperative care in the NICU to ensure proper recovery and support.

The three parts of the surgery were: inguinal exploration, performed to examine and assess the groin area; appendectomy, to remove the appendix; and herniotomy, to repair the hernia by removing the hernia sac and fixing the defect in the abdominal wall. The entire procedure lasted for an hour. The pediatric surgery team, led by Dr. M. Saravana Balaji and Dr. N. Prathiba, carried out the procedure with the assistance of the anesthesia team, including Dr. K. Anand and Dr. Dheepak

Kumaran, along with NICU doctors Dr. S. Subash and Dr. Ashok C.

Dr. P. Sathyanarayanan, President, SRM Global Hospitals, said, "This case shows our hospital's ability to tackle even the rarest conditions and set new standards in medical care."

In his comments, Dr. Saravana Balaji said, "The newborn had been in the Neonatal ICU since birth. The baby developed obstructed right inguinoscrotal swelling on the 23rd day. We had to do emergency surgery, as the condition was life-threatening. While neonatal hernias are relatively common in preterm babies, Amyand's hernia is exceptionally rare. It affects only about 0.42% of these infants. Even rarer is the perforated appendix, occurring in just 0.1% of Amyand's hernia cases. To date, only three such cases have been reported globally. Our prompt intervention was crucial in addressing this complex and rare condition."

SMART Technologies launches transformative interactive displays for education

Chennai, Sep 12: SMART Technologies, a global leader in interactive technology, announced its launch in the Chennai market. The company also unveiled the SMART Board MX Series and SMART Board GX Series interactive displays. With over 35 years of global experience in the interactive technology market along with local distribution partners, Indian manufacturing and tailored local education content, SMART is uniquely positioned to support Indian schools with locally-made, outcome-focused technology that will support the transformation of India's education environments.

SMART's interactive displays and software are created to bring learning to life with easy-to-use features that save teachers time and engage students in their learning. They're engineered in-house at SMART with unique features and options – including SMART IQ® with the MX Series. This designed-for-education embedded computing solution is easy to use from day one. SMART displays have multiple options for student engagement and upgradability options that are unique in the market, and they use less power than other brands. SMART displays are not only built to last but to evolve with the needs of the classroom.

The company is establishing manufacturing locally in India, not only enhancing its production capabilities but also reinforcing its dedication to the Indian market. SMART is working with one of India's largest Electronic Manufacturing Services (EMS) have chosen partners with established and proven capability for production of Interactive Flat Panels to meet their exacting quality standards. This local work represents a significant step in optimizing supply chains, increasing local manufacturing efficiency, and fostering economic growth within the region.

Jeff Lowe, Executive Vice President, SMART Technologies, stated, "As pioneers and leaders in the interactive touch technology space, our launch in India is a testament to our commitment to this dynamic market. Our promise is to help teachers, students, and education leaders create connections that matter, and we're thrilled to bring this promise, and our leading products, to the millions of students and teachers here in India. Needless to say, SMART is here to stay and we look forward to working with schools and organizations across the country."

In addition, SMART is pleased to announce three inaugural SMART Exemplary Schools in India. These three Indian schools proudly join more than 35 global schools named as part of this prestigious designation of schools that demonstrate innovative leadership in using educational technology to deliver positive learning outcomes.

GEI's Subhedar Wada Medium School in Mumbai, Surana High Tech International School in Chennai, and Sense Kaleidoscopes in Bengaluru were awarded as SMART Exemplary Schools in the coming days, marking the first of their kind in the country.

Walmart grant for technological innovation in agriculture

Chennai, Sep 12: The Walmart Foundation announced three new grants totaling $2.73 million to advance technological innovation in India's agriculture sector. With the Walmart Foundation funding, the National Entrepreneurship Network (NEN), Cornell University in support of the Tata-Cornell Institute for Agriculture and Nutrition (TCI) and Precision Development (PxD) collectively aim to reach over 3,00,000 farmers in India.

Through tech-powered interventions, these grants aim to enhance farmer livelihoods, increase market access and promote sustainable agricultural practices, thereby contributing to the Walmart and Walmart Foundation goal of reaching 1 million smallholder farmers by 2028, with at least 50% women, across India's agriculture sector.

"Smallholder farmers are a crucial link to advancing India's agriculture ecosystem. Our grantees are investing in FPOs to promote sustainable agricultural practices, enable more opportunities for smallholder farmers and enhance access to tech-driven solutions- all of which help farming communities that lack financial resources add to their incomes in a scalable way," said Julie Gehrki, Vice President for the Walmart Foundation.
